The Senate was called to order by the President pro tem and opened with prayer by the Chaplain.

He had twice voted for Mr. Gilmer-not because the latter was an American-not that he loved Mr. Sherman less, but because he leved order more, and was anxious to rescue the House from its difficulties. Mr. Sherman had satisfactorily explained to him that he entertained no sympathy with the sentiments of the Helper book. In conclusion, he called attention to a Union meeting, held in Luzerne county, the proceedings of which, without doubt, were expressive of the sentiments of the entire people of Pennsylvania.

> The resolutions approved the conduct of Governor Wise in his dealings with the Harper Ferry conspirators, and sternly condemn such invasions of Southern States and aggressions upon their rights.

Mr. Campbell rose to second the patriotic resolutions. He maintained that Pennsylvania was loyal to the Constitution and laws, and had always, and would ever insist on the equality of the States. She was an empire in herself, containing three millions of people; and sat like a monarch on her own mountains, with an iron crown upon her stitution and laws, and because he was an unflinching triend to protection to American manufactures.

Mr. Pugh, of Ala., made a speech presentng the following points: first, the present condition of public opinion as to the real character of our confederated system; secondly, the basis and motive of that opinion; and, thirdly, the remedy for the evils which have impaired the integrity of the government, and now threaten the subversion of the Constitution.
